

For Immediate Release

January 21, 2010

Loyce McVay Now FWBBC 'Business Office Associate'

NASHVILLE, TN—Long-time Free Will Baptist Bible College data processing coordinator Loyce McVay notified college officials that effective January 2010 she plans to reduce her work hours from full-time to 20 hours per week. With the reduction in hours, her job title and responsibilities shift as well. She is now identified as "Business Office Associate" and will assist Comptroller Craig Mahler.

"I was barely out of my teens when the college employed me full-time back in 1965," McVay said. "I started out in the basement printing on mimeograph machines and offset presses, then moved from typewriters to computers, changing roles and equipment as the need arose. I've done something few others have—I served with four FWBBC presidents, met hundreds of students, and worked alongside the best people on God's earth. But it's time for me to take a step back and slow the pace."

Miss McVay underwent an extensive surgical procedure in late October 2009, and just returned from a lengthy recovery period. She says she will enjoy not making the 65-mile round-trip drive from the Pleasant View area five days a week.

Tom Sass, FWBBC's vice president for financial affairs, said, "Loyce was my first boss when I began working here in 1972. She had already been on staff seven years and was a seasoned professional when I reported for duty my rookie year. What a great colleague she has been, what a humble servant of God. She always stepped up when something extra had to be done. I hope she enjoys this time of less work stress and the freedom to follow her dreams. She deserves it."